It crept in slowly, before you realized what was going on, and then it completely took control of your life. It kept from you getting loans, buying a car, getting a job, renting or buying a house. It even kept you from getting a credit card, the one thing people told you that you needed in order to fix your credit.

It just stayed there, falling down, going up a few points, falling down again. You try and take a step forward but then you can't and it's all your credit's fault.
