1. Introduction

No matter how busy your schedule, you've probably found yourself with unplanned, unused time on your hands at one point or another. Perhaps you've been waiting in the airport for a delayed flight, bored and wishing for something more profitable or productive than reading a book or browsing the duty-free stores.

A commute represents wasted time in many people's days. If you spend 15, 30, or even 60 minutes waiting on the bus or train each day, imagine the amount of time lost over a year.

Maybe you find yourself with unscheduled downtime between meetings in the office, or at home when dinner plans fall through. Such unstructured hours happen to everyone, but you know that your time is your most valuable resource.

You want to know how to make the most of your free time, earning more money, expanding your opportunities, and having fun in the process.

PeerTime is the solution for you.

2. Existing Issues And Market Gaps

Inefficiency plagues our modern lives. Despite advances in technology, methodologies, and mindsets, our society still wastes a vast amount of time every day.

Consider the time that's lost from your own daily schedule. Waiting for the train, bus, or rideshare to work can eat up 15 or 20 minutes of your day each way. Once you reach the office, you risk losing time waiting for software to load, an appointment to arrive, or a video call to begin. It doesn't matter how carefully you plan your day or how strictly you live by your agenda. Lines at lunch, temperamental office equipment, traffic jams, and a thousand other inconveniences can chip away at your schedule, impacting your productivity and your performance.

Inefficiency becomes a particular problem for professionals who bill by the hour. Doctors, lawyers, consultants, and many self-employed professionals charge for actual services rendered. Consider how many billable hours are lost while you're between projects. The hard truth is that many entrepreneurs, self-employed workers, and billable professionals face expensive periods of downtime.

Imagine reclaiming the gaps in your schedule. Whether you're temporarily out of work, have taken a brief break, or have merely discovered an unscheduled period in your day, wouldn't it be ideal to make your free time more profitable, productive, and professional?

5. Use Cases

Explore a variety of use cases ideal for the PeerTime connection model.

Anna, stay-at-home-parent

Anna is a stay-at-home parent to two small children. She and her partner live outside a major metropolitan area, allowing her to stay home with their family while he commutes to the city for work each day. Like many new parents, Anna has struggled to adjust to this time of life. While she loves her children, she also misses the adult interactions and professional challenges of her previous career. She's faced a hard time making new friends in this phase. Thanks to the unpredictable schedule imposed by two young children, Anna doesn't feel confident making plans or meeting people at spur-of-the-moment events.

Anna's PeerTime Solution

Anna would benefit from a variety of PeerTime services. PeerTime's QuickFriend will allow her to have a quick chat with a friendly PeerTime user at any time. There's no need to stress about nap time, snacks, or packing the diaper bag with QuickFriend. Instead, Anna can simply find someone to talk to whenever there's space in her day.

Anna can also stay connected to her professional aspirations through PeerTime Conferences. These live discussions are more attainable for Anna's current family commitments than travelling to a physical conference would be. Attending a PeerTime Conference will still allow Anna to take part in industry conversations, interact with thought leaders, and maintain her professional voice.

John, motivational speaker

John is a motivational speaker and personal coach who's starting to consider retirement. After decades of professional success, he's ready to relax, enjoy some personal projects, and spend more of his time with his family. However, John isn't sure about making the transition just yet. He truly enjoys meeting new people and helping his clients work through their problems. He worries about stagnating in retirement, but isn't sure how to shift to a more relaxed path.

John's PeerTime Solution

Again, PeerTime offers multiple tools to help John navigate this phase of his life. PeerTime Conference is the ideal solution that will allow John to maintain a speaking and presenting schedule while also enjoying himself in retirement. Through PeerTime Conference, John can plan, organise, and headline conferences that allow him to share his knowledge and expertise with a new audience.

PeerTime Professional is another valuable option for John. This connection method allows him to continue his personal coaching work through on-one-on connections with other users.

Aditi, lawyer

Aditi is a lawyer who has just left her previous firm to open her own practice. She's already established a small core of clients, but in these early stages of her company's lifecycle, she occasionally finds herself with downtime. Aditi knows this is to be expected when growing a firm, but she is concerned about bringing in enough revenue to keep her doors open. She's also looking to grow her client base and is always seeking new connections.

Aditi's PeerTime Solution

Aditi can explore several PeerTime offerings to fill her schedule, meet new prospects, and find additional revenue. PeerTime Professional will enable Aditi to provide expert advice when her schedule allows it. These meetings can help her make her time more profitable as well as connect her with clients.

PeerTime Targeted Chat is an innovative method for Aditi to reach out to business prospects. Instead of scrolling aimlessly through suggested contacts on LinkedIn or Facebook, Aditi can directly get in touch with potential clients through PeerTime. This connection method is more personalized and immediate, giving Aditi a valuable boost in finding new clients.

6. The Addressable Market

Today's consumers spend increasing amounts of their time online. Basic responsibilities such as socialising, shopping, and professional networking have moved from physical, in-person activities to digital tasks. Social media and messenger applications represent a large portion of our online activities. These platforms provide a useful service in helping people feel connected to their broader community, but also represent potential lost time. Even the most dedicated and driven professionals can accidentally waste time on a chat or social app.

PeerTime capitalises on this move to the online sphere. PeerTime still addresses the basic human instinct to form connections with other people. However, PeerTime's structure encourages users to spend their time in a useful, productive manner.
